

The UK's most reliable car According to Which? survey

Honda's new Accord has been named as the UK's most reliable car in this year's Which? car survey. The car achieved a reliability score of 99%, one of the highest scores ever achieved; closely followed by the new Honda Jazz in second place with a score of 98%.

Honda cars hold four of the top ten places in the recent survey. As well as the new Jazz reaching second place, the first generation Jazz also scored 95.9% achieving sixth place in the survey. The Civic Hybrid achieved pole position in the hybrid vehicle sector with a score of 95.7%, seventh place in the overall survey.

A total of 77,000 drivers across the UK took part in the Which? survey to assess customer satisfaction. The survey based its results on breakdowns, faults and general niggles over a twelve month period.

HONDA CIVIC INTERIOR

HONDA CIVIC TYPE S

Honda has also performed well in the recent JD Power survey, coming second overall and have appeared in the top three car manufacturers for four years running

